

ABSTRACT

A contact sensitive device includes a member capable of supporting bending waves, a first sensor mounted on the member for measuring bending wave vibration in the member, the 5 sensor determining a first measured bending wave signal, a second sensor to determine a second measured bending wave signal and a processor that optimises a product of a set of corrected impulse response measurements from each sensor to determine information related to a contact.